TEARDROP MINISTRY PRAYER

Blessed Monica, mother of St. Augustine, we give thanks to our Father in Heaven who looked with mercy upon your tears over your wayward son. His conversion and heroic sanctification were the fruit of your prayers.

Dear St. Monica we now ask you to pray with us for all those sons and daughters that have wandered away from God, and to add your prayers to those of all mothers who are worried over their children. Pray also for us that, following your example, we may, in the company of our children, one day enjoy the eternal vision of our Father in Heaven. Amen. St. Monica pray for us.

Reflection

By Rev. Leonard N. Peterson

The Sisyphus legend is a Greek myth about a cunning king condemned to an eternal punishment: endlessly pushing a boulder up a hill, only for it to roll back down every time he nears the top. Sisyphus was punished for betraying the god Zeus by revealing the whereabouts of Zeus' kidnapped daughter, and for cheating death twice, most notably by chaining Thanatos (Death). The term "Sisyphean task" now describes any repetitive, frustrating, or impossible labor. Or any job that demands perseverance to accomplish.

Living a true Christian life can sometimes seem like a "Sisyphean task" does it not? We make good progress for a while. We are on good terms with Christ. Our attitude is positive, and life is good. Then, suddenly, we fall back and lose ground. All that takes is a thought, word, or action contrary to what Christ expects of us. One "drink too many" at a party. One lie added to the story to make it more impressive. One impure thought not dismissed because we like the picture. The confessional beckons but we let it pass. Maybe we're just too lazy or ashamed to make an appointment with the priest to be reconciled with the Lord we have offended.

This is exactly where the difference comes in between the punishment given to King Sisyphus and the opportunity given us by Christ our King.

You see, we Christians believe ourselves to have a baptismal call to think, believe and behave in a certain way. It is not a punishment, but instead, a way to prove our love for someone who has first loved us. God Himself. He is who has created us out of nothing, believing that His Kingdom would be incomplete without us in it. One who also promises a life of unending happiness after this brief testing time here on earth.

The arrogant King Sisyphus chose to go his own way, despite what he knew to be right. He set up his fate without knowing what it would entail. He is part of a myth meant to teach. We humble Christian believers instead choose to go Christ's way, and despite our weakness in choosing occasional detours, lovingly teach it to each new generation. Our perseverance profits us from a peace this world cannot bring and lets us believe in ourselves as well.

"Believe you can and you're halfway there."
-Theodore Roosevelt

God love you and give you, His peace.

Pastor of St Rita,

To know the end is near, to watch for the end, St. Augustine taught that the fruit of such knowledge and vigilance is patience. Instead of anxiety, instead of chaos and overactivity, rather calm should rest the soul of the believer.

The readings this Sunday are indeed about the end. "Lo, the day is coming, blazing like an oven," the passage from Malachi begins (Mal 3:19). Like Jeremiah before him, Jesus talks about the destruction of the temple; after this, he'll talk about the destruction of Jerusalem. Yet what he fully means by "the end" is bigger than that (Lk 21:5-24). Jesus here is talking apocalyptically.

That is, reading all this we can't help but think of the ultimate end. Of that inevitable future these passages are meant to remind us. We are being spiritually prepared in these readings for the season of Advent, prepared even for that reality beyond all Advents, for the final advent of Christ the Lord.

Which is a reality that will indeed have something of the fire of judgment to it, the destruction and re-construction of things. It will indeed be an awesome advent, a fearful thing, in many ways. But again, as St. Augustine repeatedly preached, this should not cause believers any sort of anxiety or stir up any sort of foolishness. Rather, the fruits of such knowledge should be the virtues. "Those who realize they are living as strangers in this world," St. Augustine said, "who know they have an eternal home country in heaven...they know how to live here patiently."

St. Augustine here was preaching on the last line from this Sunday's gospel: "By your perseverance you will secure your lives" (Lk 21:19). The Greek word hypomone can just as easily be translated as patience. That, St. Augustine said, should be what we take from the Lord's words here, the spiritual capacity to endure.

This is the virtue found among the martyrs. When St. Augustine talks about the martyrs, he talks about things like patience and endurance. "Endure for time, rejoice forever," he preached elsewhere. When Christians suffer persecution patiently, he said, they produce a "grand crop." "It is from these sheaves that crowns are made," St. Augustine said.

This is exactly what St. Paul taught. It's why we Christians strangely "rejoice in our sufferings." Because we know that "suffering produces endurance, and endurance produces character, and character produces hope, and hope does not disappoint us." The idea is that given the knowledge of God's ultimately victory, born of the love that has been "poured into our hearts through the Holy Spirit who has been given to us," we believers should be strong enough to withstand the temptations, the harassments, and all the weight of the world's evil (Rom 5:3-5). Because we know who wins.

But knowledge of the ultimate end of all things and the virtues of patience and endurance should also bear upon ordinary life. Yes, each of us should be willing to be a martyr for Christ; however, most of us are called to apply our faith and our virtues more humbly, in smaller ways. That, I take it, is what St. Paul was on about writing to the Thessalonians. It seems a few of the faithful had gotten themselves so worked up about the final advent of Christ that they not only misunderstood it, but they also ended up making themselves fools needing reproof.

Which is why, to those living "in a disorderly way," St. Paul said, in substance, get back to work. He even suggested, proverbially if not literally, that such idle busybodies should not eat. He exhorted them, authoritatively "in the Lord Jesus Christ," to work quietly and earn their own living.

Clearly then, to know that the Lord will return is not to give up on the world. Rather, it's to take up everyday life, the ordinary life we've always known, but with a new sort of spirit and with faith, hope and love. And that's a beautiful lesson. To see how all the apocalyptic talk in the Bible relates to our ordinary lives, it's meant to renew us, to give us perspective and grace and strength. It's meant to give us the grit to keep going in the way of Christ's truth and to love no matter how weird the world gets. Because we know the mystery. Because we know the Lord. We know who wins.
